Sanders), conducted over 150 interviews with regular or special education teachers/administrators/ curriculum specialists of public /private schools as well as learning academy/centers across 17 States of US and a few math teachers from China. As a result, the team identified potential customer segment of the COMMIT math intelligent tutors (Developed by Dr Xin and her team via the support from NSF during the past decade) as well as the value proposition of the COMMIT product, for promoting the marketing of research-based practice. During the I-Corps training, the team completed over 12 presentations including a final video presentation as well as a final PPT presentation illustrating the value proposition, supported hypotheses and disapproved hypotheses, as well as a completed Business Model Canvas. In addition, a 10-page long (single spacing) business plan for the marketing of the COMMIT product was submitted to Purdue Foundry on Nov 30, 2018. Dr. Xin created /submitted final project report (2018).

As the Principal Investigator/Project Director of the NSF-funded COMPS-RtI, 2015-present), and NMRSD (nurturing multiplicative reasoning of students with learning difficulties) multi-disciplinary project (2008-2015), Dr. Xin is responsible for overseeing and management of the entire project (include hosting weekly multi-disciplinary project team meetings, design and implementing pilot studies at research sites, budget management/equipment/material purchasing, personnel employment) and research team. In addition, Dr. Xin's primary responsibilities (with co-PIs) include intensive engagement in the design and development of the COMPS-RtI and NMRSD-CCME intelligent tutor system. Below lists selected additional activities Dr. Xin led:

- *NSF-supported NMRSD project reverse site visit at NSF: On June 19, 2009, Xin brought the project Team (3 PIs) to NSF in Washington DC for a reverse-site visit, reporting the progress of the NMRSD project to the NSF officers and leading scholars in the field nationwide. The two hour meeting included Xin (with two co-PIs) 1.5-hr presentation and a half-hour Q & A session.
- *Working with two co-PIs and the team, Dr. Xin created /submitted annual project reports (2009, 26 pages; 2010; 19 pages, 2011, 18 pages, 2012, 19 pages, 2013, 18 pages, 2014, 19 pages, 2015, 16 pages/ 2016, 20 pages, 2017/15 pages, 2018/16 pages) to NSF.
- *Create and update the content of project website.
